Arabic Writing

This section describes the arabic alphabet, and how it can be written using roman letters.

Please remember that Egyptian Arabic is an oral language. When people are asked to write it, some write in Modern Standard Arabic and then pronounce it the Egyptian way, others write it as an Egyptian would say it. As a result, there may be some variation in the way things are spelt. For example, many verbs end in alif-layena Y ﻯ, but many people write it as a regular alif aa ﺃ.

Arabic script

There are 28 basic letters in Egyptian arabic, and about a dozen modifiers.

Writing goes from right to left, and the majority of arabic letters join onto the following letter and so there are therefore four forms of each letter: solitary, initial, middle and final. For the six letters that do not join, there are just two forms- solitary and final.

position	normal letter	non-joining letter
solitary	ج	د
initial	جـ
middle	ـجـ
final	جّ	دّ

The three short vowels aَ, iَ and uُ and shadda ّ, which doubles the length of a consonant, are collectively called tashkyl تَشْكِيل or vowelization. Tashkyl is not normally used in written arabic apart from in the Quran. If they are used, they are written above a consonant but pronounced after it: for the convenience of non-arabic readers, I have included the tashkyl, but written it after the consonant.

Transliterated arabic

The transliterated form is an exact representation of the arabic script in roman letters: this is not always straightforward, as there are a lot more letters and modifiers in arabic than there are in the roman alphabet.

If you want to be able to say words accurately, you need to be able to read either arabic or the transliterated form- for example, so that you can see the difference between syn and saad.

Here is a brief summary that shows the relationship between different groups of letters:

Letter	Transliterated	Arabic
short vowel	a i u	ا إ و
long vowel (alif)	aa ee ii uu	آ إ ي
alif with hamza	aac iic uuc	أ إ ئ
other long vowels	y w	ي و
other long vowels with hamza	yc wc	ئ و
gluttal stop qaf	q	ق

voiced qaf	Q	Q ق
soft consonant	d h s t z	d h s t z د ه س ت ز
alveolar consonant	D H S T Z	D H S T Z ض ح ص ط ظ
double-letter consonants	dh sh th	dh sh th ذ ش ث
t-marbuta	o	_ao ةـ
alif-layena	Y	_Y ى

It is readable if you ignore hamza C ء and tee-marbuta _o ة, and read alif-layena Y ى as a.

See the Arabic Alphabet section for full information about each arabic letter, including the european letters used.

ا fatha

Fatha is the short vowel corresponding to a. It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

Example words

Transliterated: a

IPA Phonetic: /æ/

Tashkyl: َ

waTaweeT

hasab

marakbiyyah bank

yihanni

وَطَاوَيْط

حَسَبَ

مَرَاكَبِيَّه

بَنَك

يَهَنِّي

kasra

Kasra is the short vowel corresponding to i. It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

Transliterated: i IPA Phonetic: /ɪ/
Tashkyl: -

Example words

zira Aa t	ذِرَاعَات
baeli Geen	بَالِغِينَ
Tili A	طَلِيع
waegih	وَأَجِه
'istilif	إِسْتِلِف

damma

Damma is the short vowel corresponding to u. It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

Transliterated: u
IPA Phonetic: /ʊ/
Tashkyl: ُ

Example words

muhri geen	مُحَرِّجِينَ
Quma esh	قُومَاشَ
ku weeti	كُؤَيْتِي
fur ma	فُرْمَة
'u rood	قُرُود

shadda

Shadda is written above a consonant and doubles the consonant. Unlike in english, double consonants are pronounced, so if you take katab and put a shadda above the t, it will be pronounced kat-tab, with one t and the end of the first syllable and one t at the beginning of the next syllable. Shadda is often omitted in written arabic.

Transliterated: W
IPA Phonetic: // Tashkyl: ّ

alif-hamza above

Alif with a hamza above is used mainly at the beginning of words. It represents a gluttal stop followed by fatha - a short a. Strictly speaking, it should be written with both a hamza and a fatha.

Transliterated: aac
IPA Phonetic: /ʔæ/
Join left: no
Sun letter: no
Solitary: ا
Final: اَ

Example words

' af Aa	أَفْعَى
' az ma	أَزْمَة
' ah l	أَهْل
' ass is	أَسْيس
'an wae A	أَنَوَاع

ا alif-hamza below

Alif with a hamza below is used only at the beginning of words. It represents a gluttal stop followed by kasra - a short i. Strictly speaking, it should be written with both a hamza and a kasra. Alif-hamza below is used at the beginning of the perfect of many derived verbs, which are formed by adding a prefix it-, in-, ist- and iʔt- to a base verb. These derived verbs often have a passive be ...ed or reflexive oneself, each other meaning.

Transliterated: iic
IPA Phonetic: /ʔɪ/

'itmarran	إِتَمَرَّان
'ilaehi	إِلَاهِي
'itrabba	إِتْرَبَّا

أ alif-damma

Alif with a damma above is used only at the beginning of words. It represents a gluttal stop followed by damma - a short u. Strictly speaking, it should be written with both a hamza and a damma.

Transliterated: uuc
IPA Phonetic: /ʔʊ/
Join left: no
Sun letter: no
Solitary: أ
Final: أُ

Example words

'uraaD	أَرَاض
il'uwla	إِلْأُولَى
'uSool	أُصُول
'uKt	أُخْت
'umam	أُمَم

ا alif-fatha

Alif with a fatha is used only in the middle and at the end of words. It is usually pronounced either as ae as in aeroplane, or as ar as in hard: these two forms are represented as ae and aa respectively in transliterated arabic. When it is followed by two consonants in a row or a consonant and a long vowel, it is shortened to a short a.

When it follows a lam, the two letters are joined together and written لا. At the end of the 'we' and 'they' form of pronouns and verbs, wow-alif is pronounced as oo.

Transliterated: aa
IPA Phonetic: /æ/
Join left: no
Sun letter: no
Solitary: ا
Final: اَ

Example words

wuSoolaat	وُصُولَات
faar	فَار
'itZaahir	إِظَاهِر
mahaSeel	مَحَاَصِيل
Saadi'	صَادِق

ا alif-kasra

Alif-kasra is used only in ال il, the prefix meaning 'the'. As the kasra is never actually written, it is not clear whether 'the' should be pronounced il, el, or al. As a result, there are regional differences in pronunciation. In the dictionary, we have standardized on il, to avoid confusion.

Transliterated: ii

IPA Phonetic: /ɪ/

Egyptian is a dialect of arabic spoken by 85 million people who are spread along a narrow strip of land beside 1500km of the river Nile. Egyptian arabic is a living, ever-changing language; it's not taught in schools and it's rarely written down.

As a result, there are considerable variations in vocabulary and pronunciation. Let's not talk about spelling :-/. The details in this dictionary have been checked and cross-checked, but there will always be mistakes and inconsistencies.

We do not accept any responsibility for any loss, injury or embarrassment that may result from the use of this dictionary.
